

Organization for the Self Study

In Spring 2003, an accreditation calendar was developed under the direction of Accreditation Liaison Officer and Dean of Instruction, Tony Cantú. In the Fall 2003, Dean Cantú moved to Reedley College to serve a one-year term as interim college president. During the Fall 2003 semester, under the direction of Interim Dean of Instruction Debbie Ikeda, the Fresno City College Institutional Planning and Budget Committee (IPBC) was provided with training on the new WASC accreditation standards.

In Spring 2004, the IPBC became the Accreditation Steering Committee. The committee was initially chaired by President Ned Doffoney. At the first meeting, the committee selected Cyndie Luna, coordinator of planning, faculty development, and program review, to be the faculty co-chair. During Summer 2005, Maggie Taylor, academic senate president, became the second faculty chair. Nine standard committees were developed and each committee was staffed with three to four co-chairs to include an administrator, faculty member, classified professional, and a student. The accreditation steering committee consisted of the standard committee co-chairs, senior deans, associate deans of instruction, a Reedley College liaison, and a district office liaison. During Spring 2004, the standard committees worked to develop an evidence inventory, and a student survey was selected and administered. These data would serve as the springboard for writing in Fall 2004. Progress was reported bi-weekly at accreditation steering committee meetings and through the use of a Blackboard web site.

In Fall 2004, Tony Cantú returned to Fresno City College as dean of instruction and accreditation liaison officer. Writing of the self study began in Fall 2004 and continued through Spring 2005. An online staff survey was developed and administered. The accreditation steering committee met bi-weekly to discuss progress, share drafts, and receive assignments. Drafts were distributed campuswide for review and input. They could be downloaded from the Internet or hard copies could be requested. The draft was completed in Spring 2005 for review by the chancellor and the board of trustees at the June 2005 board meeting.
